"The model husband, in my opinion, is neither a master nor a slave. He is the person who always under-stands. He combines all the nices? qualities of one's nicest girl friends with the something more that is the man's outlook. He is the perfect companion."

When Mrs. Charles E. Abbott, who manages to be a prominent club-woman and a happy wife and mother at one and the same time, was asked to define the model husband she laughed. A MODEL IS A MINIATURE IMITA-TION OF THE REAL THING. "I once knew a woman who said she had one," she explained, "Over and Dr. Soule knows there is a motel over again this woman dilated on the and, because he belongs to her, supreme joys of possessing a model husband. A MODEL HUSBAND.

But for Mrs. Frederic Hardenbr who is better known as Miss Mary Coleman, lawyer and suffragette, the test of a model husband is his belief in votes for women.

"And there are plenty of model husbands in Marlem," she declared. You can always tell them-they aren't afraid to push baby carringes.

"The model husband is simply a hu-man being, and he believes that his wife is a human being, not a child nor an inferior in any way. He'll help her with the housework when she's tired, and when he goes out for a car ride or a show in the evening he'll take her dong with him. "It's a wonder he exists, though, when there aren't any magazines to tell him how to behave. For years the women's publications have been telling wives how to be 'models' and thus retain the affection of their husbands. Nobody seemed to think these gentlemen needed any lectures. But finally the wives themselves began to set up a standard, and the young girls who were being nexed to marry. The model husband is a comparatively recent production, and the supply came into existence to satisfy a feminine demand. It's not big enough yet, but, thank goodness, it's growing!" the wives themselves began to set up

IN CHASE AFTER SAFE-BLOWERS

Desperadoes Exchange Shots With Eight Detectives on Streets of Brooklyn.

The neighborhood of Broadway and lushwick avenue. Brooklyn, got a thrill urly to-day. Two safe blowers were nterrupted in the work of wrecking the big safe of the C. Ludwig Haumann Ca.'s store. Their accomplice was knocked on the head by the police. The safe blowers then made a rush at eight detectives in waiting with drawn revolvers. A running battle, in which more than fifty shots were fired, was maintained for five blocks and the two desperadoes escaped, Detective Gilday of Deputy Commisdoners Dougherty's staff had received a tip that a safe blowing job was scheduled in Brooklyn. He detailed Detectives Oliver, Riley, Finan and Cunningham, Bergeant Conty and others and the trail of the yeggmen was picked up on the east side of Manhattan. Three men comprised the party of safe blowers. With the policemen on their trail, they separated in Brooklyn, the police losing all but one, whom they followed to the furniture store of C. Ludwig Baumant & Co., No. 149-1465 Broadway.

The man was the "lookout" for the other two. He went to the Putnam avenue side of the store and stood in the doorway. After several minutes the front door was opened and the two nising men appeared. They handed two balls of string to the 'lookout.'

The name, like a check, only

sers and disappeared inside the building.

The police, under Lieut, Gilday, were stationed toward Broadway. They waited until a muffied sound came from within the building, then crept down on the "lookout," who was easily overpowered, but in the struggle the string was broken.

The breaking of the string was a signal to the men inside that something had gone wrong. In a very short time they appeared at the door, each with a revolver. They turned loose their weapons at the police and ran down Putnam avenue into Bushwick avenue, the police in pursuit, their shots sounding like the back-fire of a dozen automobiles.

The desperadoes shot as they ran Windows were flung open and heads popped out, to be instantly withdrawn as flames spouted from the revolvers. When the police turned into Evergreen avenue and headed toward Gates
